3. BODY OF POLICY

3.1. Background

Successful research scholarship recipients may undertake their scholarship on a part-time basis, as outlined in this Policy.

Part-time scholarships are available to post-graduate research scholars supported by a research institution only.

3.2. Part-time Research Workload

Part-time is defined as half of the usual research hours worked by a research scholar. The actual number of research hours required per week to meet this criterion is to be determined between the scholar and supervisor within the research department.

3.3. Applicable Scholarships and Fellowships

Unless stated otherwise on their individual conditions, all post-graduate research scholarships and Fellowships may be undertaken part-time.

3.4. Duration of Award

One-year research scholarships, when completed in a part-time capacity, may be taken over two years at half time from the commencement of the scholarship. Two- and three-year scholarships may be taken over a maximum of four and six years respectively.

Where research is undertaken on a part-time basis for an odd number of years or for a portion of a year, the scholar will complete their scholarship as negotiated with RACS.

3.5. Notice

3.5.1 Changing from full to part-time

Recipients may change from full-time to part-time, unless otherwise stated for their scholarship. To do so, a scholarship amendment form stating the expected start and finish date of the part-time study period must be submitted to the Scholarships and Grants Department in advance of the reduction of research hours.

3.5.2 New successful recipients

Applicants who have been informed that their application was successful may select the part-time option on their scholarship acceptance form.
3.6. Restrictions

Recipients may opt to undertake part-time scholarships for reasons including, but not limited to care-giving, health and parental responsibilities. Part-time scholarships are restricted to recipients wishing to undertake research as their primary focus over professional work. Recipients may engage in professional work in Australia or New Zealand for additional remuneration, up to a recommended average of 20% of the research hours being undertaken each working week.

Professional work for additional remuneration should be undertaken with the permission of the recipient's supervisor and employing institution. Permission could be sought for, but not limited to, clinical sessional work, teaching and consulting.

3.7. Value of the Scholarship

Part-time scholarships will be paid at half of the advertised rate per annum. If the scholar changes from a full-time load to half-time load or the reverse, payments will be adjusted accordingly.
